A PROBLEM WORTH SOLVING

Donated blood is cut into 4 different components because most patients only need one part, such as the red blood cells or the platelets.

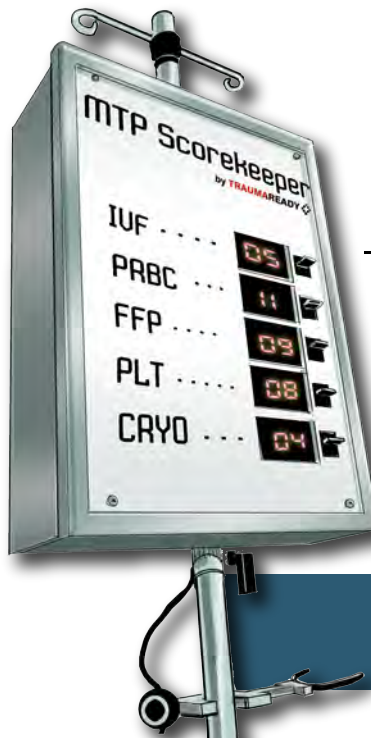

Rapidly bleeding patients are much more likely to survive if the 4 components are transfused in a specific ratio, but this is logistically difficult.

MTP (MASSIVE TRANSFUSION PROTOCOL) SCOREKEEPER

...is a simple device that allows Doctors to transfuse the different components of blood into a rapidly bleeding patient in a very precise way, which has been proven to dramatically improve survival.

OUR SOLUTION

The MTP Scorekeeper is a device used in hospitals when “massive” blood transfusions are given. It looks like a lighted scoreboard that attaches to the device used to transfuse blood, and keeps track of each blood component as it is transfused. This allows the ratios to stay on track which gives a bleeding patient their best chance of survival.
